British GI Brides Are Promised a Ride

LONDON, Nov 25—Defiantly joined the ranks of American servicemen to the altar of love, 180 British-American brides on this side of the Atlantic found themselves stranded in Italy, France, Belgium, the Middle East and in other far-flung corners of the world. They are now en route to their husbands here and in the American zone of Germany, the United States and in the United Kingdom.

The war brides, whose ringed hands were clasped in prayers of thanksgiving to a Higher Power, are now being transported by “American” ships, which have been assigned to the transport of American brides. The first of these ships, the Queen Mary, is now en route to New York, where the新娘es will disembark. The Queen Mary will then sail for London, to pick up the second group of brides. The third group of brides will sail from Lisbon, Portugal, on the Queen Elizabeth.

Each of the three ships is equipped with a hospital and a dispensary and is staffed by a medical officer and a nurse. The ships are also equipped with a kitchen and a recreational room.

The brides are being housed in the upper deck of the ships, where they are being fed three times a day. They are also being given a daily dose of medicine to prevent seasickness.

The transportation of the brides is being carried out by the American Red Cross, which is also providing medical and nursing care for the brides.

During their short sojourn here, the Turks lived in a furnished room. They were supplied with food and water. However, things are now better. They have a small apartment and she has a part-time job to help support the family.

Kathryn Klueck, a former schoolteacher, said she was surprised to find how much her life had changed since she came to Turkey. "I never thought I would be living in a country where I had to learn a new language," she said. "But I am very happy here and we are making the best of it."

The women are now living in Istanbul, where they have found work in a local restaurant.

The X-Wives Club has no formal organization and no officers. They meet once a week and have a lot of fun together, cooking, sewing, bowling, movies and concerts. They also go on trips and visit other places of interest.

When asked what they would like to do in the future, the women said they would like to learn more about Turkish culture and history.

The women are also planning to open a small shop in the city where they can sell their handiwork.
